LOCAL MAN WILL HEAD CORPORATION

Lawrence A. Ebner Elected President of the Ebner Ice & Cold Storage Company.

SUCCEEDS LATE JOS. L. EBNER

New President will Probably Remove to Vincennes where Home Offices are Located.

Announcement has been made that Lawrence A. Ebner, of this city, has been elected president of the Ebner Ice & Cold Storage Company and will have the management of the chain of plants in Indiana and Illinois. The election was made at a meeting of the stockholders Friday, but the proceedings were not made public until Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Ebner succeeds the late Joseph L. Ebner, whose death occurred at Vincennes several weeks ago.

At the stockholders' meeting J. M. Westerlin, of Chicago, was named as vice-president of the corporation, H. F. Pixley, of Flora, Ill., was elected treasurer, and Walter Stein, of Vincennes, was named as secretary. Mr. Pixley and Mr. Stein held similar positions under the former organization.

The election of Lawrence A. Ebner as president of the corporation will necessitate his removal from this city to Vincennes where the home offices are located. The company was founded there in the 80's by John L. Ebner, who built up a large ice business and was the first to install an artificial ice-making machine in Indiana. The headquarters of the company have always been maintained at that place. It is announced that the policy of the newly organized company will be the same as in the past and the business will be carried on as under the former organization.

Mr. Ebner has not stated when he will remove to Vincennes but it is expected that he will remain here for several months. He has been actively connected with the local plant for a number of years and under his management the business has greatly increased. While he has been manager of the Seymour plant the output has been enlarged, several additions to the plant have been erected and a large amount of new equipment installed. He assumes his new position with a complete and thorough knowledge of the business.

Definite arrangements have not been completed for the local plant after Mr. Ebner leaves this city, but it is understood that the present force of employees will be placed in charge of the plant. There will be no changes in the present policy, it is understood.

JURY HOLDS THE DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR DAMAGES

Verdict Returned in Automobile Accident Damage Suit in About Forty-five Minutes.

After being out about forty-five minutes this morning, the jury in the case of Doane vs. Buhner, returned a verdict in favor of the defendant. The trial attracted considerable attention and was attended by a good crowd

Tuesday afternoon. The suit was the result of an automobile accident which occurred last June, in which the plaintiff, Albert Doane, was injured while riding in a car which had been hired from the Buhner garage. The plaintiff's attorney contended that the defendant was guilty of criminal carelessness in allowing the car to go out without a licensed chauffeur in charge. Counsel for the defendant contended that along with the necessary gasoline to run the engine, the occupants of the car carried a cargo of liquid refreshments and converted what was originally intended for a business trip into something closely resembling a joy ride, and maintained that the accident was only another exemplification of the fact that booze and gasoline have never yet been successfully mixed.

The defense declared the driver of the car, while not a licensed chauffeur, was a careful driver, thoroughly familiar with automobiles, that he had not partaken of the refreshments and that the occupants of the car had insisted on helping him run it and kept urging him to "let her out." The testimony in the case afforded much amusement to the spectators and witnesses who were in the court room. The case was argued and given to the jury this morning.

Judge John M. Lewis was attorney for the defendant and Seba A. Barnes represented the plaintiff.

Riley White who recently pleaded guilty to a charge of petit larceny, was sentenced to serve a term of from one to eight years in the Jeffersonville reformatory and disfranchised for four years. White is the young man who rifled the cash drawer at the Palace restaurant last month and was overtaken at North Vernon while trying to make his getaway.

Carrie J. Lockman was granted a divorce and the restoration of her maiden name in her suit against Harry T. Lockman.

The trial of Eddarius Lewis, who has been awaiting a hearing on a charge of petit larceny, was set for January 19th.

RAILROAD OFFICIALS WILL VISIT SEYMOUR THURSDAY

Proposed Increase of Passenger Rates in Indiana Will be Explained at Local Meeting.

Representatives of the passenger departments of the three railroads operating through this city will come Thursday morning and explain to the business men and public why the railroads are asking for the repeal of the two cent passenger rate law and the substitution of the two and one-half cent rate law. It is announced that all the roads will be represented either by the general or division passenger superintendents. The meeting will be called at 9:30 o'clock at the assembly room at the B. & O. Southwestern Railroad division building.

Officers of the Retail Merchants' Association and the Seymour Commercial Club are urging that all business men and merchants be present and hear what the railroad officials have to say regarding this matter. While as a general rule the public is opposed to any increase of rates it is desired that the officials be given a welcome. The representatives of the railroads will set forth facts and arguments upon which the proposed increase is based.

Similar meetings have been held in various parts of the state. The railroads desire to explain their position fully so that when the bill is introduced in the legislature the public will be apprised of the contents and will be in a better position to decide the request.

SUMMARY OF YEAR IN CIRCUIT COURT

County Clerk's Report Contains Complete Record of Work of Jackson County Tribunal.

FILED WITH STATE BUREAU

Statistics Present Interesting Figures of Year's Record of Work in That Office.

County Clerk Willard Stout has prepared the statistical report of the year's work in the circuit court and has filed the same with the state statistician. The report is a complete record of the transactions of the various departments of the office during 1914, and presents some interesting figures.

According to the report, there were a total of 228 civil cases filed during the year, and final disposition was made of 239 cases. The court venue five cases to other counties, and tried two which had been venue from other counties. 204 couples sought domestic bliss and happiness in the shape of marriage licenses, and it will not be the clerk's fault if they fail to find it, as that number of the required papers were issued. 670 ambitious hunters gladly contributed $1.00 each to the county treasury for the privilege of toting a gun over field and meadow in search of the elusive quail and the long eared bunny.

Fifty-seven couples came to the conclusion, or at least one-half of the firm did, during the year, that they had sipped the cup of domestic bliss to the dregs, and asked the court to dissolve the bonds that united them. It would seem that the wives had been the complainers in a majority of the cases, as of twenty-nine divorces granted, twenty were to wives and nine to husbands. Twenty-seven cases were either denied or dismissed.

Three German citizens were given naturalization papers during the year, while eight other erstwhile subjects of the Kaiser and one son of sunny Italy declared their intentions of becoming citizens of the United States.

There were seventy-six criminal cases filed during the year, and eighty-one cases were disposed of. There were twenty convictions for felonies and seventeen for misdemeanors.

Three cases for violation of the liquor laws were tried, and two resulted in conviction. Of the convictions for felonies, one was fined, three were sent to jail, three to the Indiana prison, six to the reformatory, two to the Indiana Woman's Prison, three to the Indiana Girls' School, and two to the Indiana Boys' School. In the conviction for misdemeanors, thirteen were fined, and four were fined and imprisoned.

There were nine children's cases tried in juvenile court during the year. Forty-three letters of administration and ten guardianships were issued, twenty-six decrees of foreclosure entered and ten sheriff's sales held during the year.

FLEMING WOULD CHANGE ROAD LAW

New Bill Introduced to Place Highways Under Control of the Board of Turnpike Directors.

SYSTEM OF COMPENSATION

Members Would Receive Ten Cents Per Mile for All Roads Under Jurisdiction—Repair Fund.

If a bill introduced by Senator Fleming in the upper branch of the Indiana legislature becomes a law the system of road repair will be radically altered. The county highway superintendent's office will be abolished and the highways will be placed under the direct control of the board of turnpike directors, consisting of the county commissioners, the county surveyor and the county auditor.

The turnpike directors are to employ a road repair man in each road district in the several townships of each county, and the road supervisor or shall be eligible to such employment. The road repair man shall in no sense be an assistant superintendent of the bill provides, but shall do actual work of repair in person. For the purpose of superintending repair work the board of turnpike directors is to divide each county into three districts, each member of the board of commissioners in each county acting as superintendent for the district from which he is elected. He shall have power to employ necessary additional labor with the approval of the turnpike directors, preference being given to landowners and laborers living along the road needing repairs.

For his services in acting as such superintendent, each commissioner is to receive a sum of 10 cents a mile for all roads under his supervision. The compensation of the road repair man shall not exceed 25 cents an hour, and if the repair man uses his team his pay is not to exceed 35 cents an hour. The county surveyor shall receive his regular per diem and necessary expenses for livery hire, and the county auditor shall receive no additional compensation. Provision is made for meetings of the board and the road repair men, and reports concerning the condition of the roads, and also for petitions by superintendents for entering upon land for drains, etc.

For the repair of roads in each township, the turnpike board shall make an annual levy not to exceed one cent upon each $100 for every mile of improved roads. The bill continues:

"The fund created under the provisions of this section shall be known as the county road repair fund and the entire amount of tax levied and collected from each township under the provisions of this act, shall be expended on the roads in said township or upon the township line, and for the purpose of repairing improved roads on the township line each township adjacent thereto shall bear one-half of such cost of repairs."

Senator Wood introduced a bill providing for the filing, recording and contest of wills during the lifetime of the testators. A bill by Senator Van Aken excuses candidates for county council, township advisory board, constables and candidates for offices with emoluments less than $100 a year from the necessity of filing campaign expense accounts with county clerks.

HORRORS! PRESIDENT IS COMPARED TO "BOSS" MURPHY

Senator Borah In Commenting on Indianapolis Speech Also Likens Wilson to Taggart.

By United Press.

Washington, January 13.—President Wilson was compared to Tom Taggart, democratic leader of Indiana, and "Boss" Murphy of Tammany Hall in the senate this afternoon by Senator Borah of Idaho. Borah was commenting on the President's speech at Indianapolis when the President said: "Those democrats who don't play on the team should get off the team."

"These were the same instructions given by Tom Taggart to the eighty benchmen of Indianapolis who were afterwards indicted for corruption in elections," said Borah. "They were the same instructions given by 'Boss' Murphy to slavish followers in Tammany Hall."

NIBLACK DEFENDS THE AMENDMENT

Indiana House by Vote of 52 to 47 Repeals 1895 Act Limited Number of Employees.

NEW BILL TO "AID" SHERIFFS

Senator Fleming Proposes to Increase Pay for Boarding Prisoners to 60 Cents a Day.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, January 13.—The house stood by the senate today and by a vote of 52 to 47 concurred in the senate amendment to the appropriation bill which repeals the act of 1895 under which the recent thirty legislative indictments were returned. The amendment was warmly defended by Representative Niblack, who was one of the indicted men, and was vigorously attacked by Representative Eshbach, Republican.

Measures introduced in the senate were:

J. R. Fleming, democrat.—To repeal the three mile road law, giving the county commissioners authority to initiate improvements.

Stephen B. Fleming, democrat.—To increase the fee of sheriff's for boarding prisoners from 40 cents to 60 cents a day.

Senator Thornton, democrat.—To repeal the "press muzzling" clause of the corrupt practice act. "I believe in a free press," he said, "and that clause is unconstitutional. Its only effect has been to intimidate the small papers while the powerful ones say what they please about candidates."

PANIC REIGNED IN ITALY AFTER SEVERE EARTHQUAKE

By United Press.

Rome, January 13.—A number of lives were lost in the severe earthquake in several provinces in Italy early today. The quake badly damaged many of Rome's historic structures and it is reported that it resulted in the loss of several lives and heavy destruction of property in the province of Abruzzi. The entire province is declared to have suffered heavily and many of the small towns have been almost completely wiped out. Many towns in Rome province also suffered. Inhabitants were caught under the ruins and crushed to death before they could be removed. The government has taken steps to aid the sufferers.

The convicts at the Frosina prison made an attempt to escape after the walls were partly destroyed. Officials say the earthquake was one of the most severe ever felt in Italy.

HOUSE DEFEATS WOMEN'S CAUSE

Suffrage Resolution Decisively Voted Down.

SPLIT IN INDIANA DELEGATION

Hoosier Congressmen Were About Evenly Divided on Resolution Which Was Voted on Regardless of Party Lines, Though the South Was Almost Solidly Against It.—Vote on Suffrage Proposal Was 174 to 204.

Washington, Jan. 13.—After six hours of heated debate the Mondell resolution proposing an amendment to the federal constitution granting to women the right to vote in all the states, was defeated in the house by a substantial vote.

Of the 378 members present, 204 voted against the resolution and 174 for it. Woman suffrage therefore polled just sixteen votes less than a majority of those present and forty-one less than a majority of full membership of the lower branch of congress.

The resolution lacked seventy-eight votes of the total necessary for its adoption, two-thirds of the house being required on constitutional amendment. Woman suffrage did not make as good a showing in the house as the prohibition amendment, which was defeated in that body a month or so ago by sixty-one votes. The prohibition amendment polled three more than a majority of the membership present.

The defeat of the resolution did not cause any surprise in Washington. It had been known for weeks that the Mondell resolution would be rejected by an impressive vote. This was confidently claimed by the "antis" and conceded by the spokesmen of suffrage. With the exception of the Progressives in the house there was no partisan line on the resolution. Republicans and Democrats divided on the proposal without regard to their political affiliations. Many of the latter, though, refused to follow President Wilson's view that woman's suffrage was a state, not a national issue. The Democrats from the south voted against the resolution almost to a man. They were held in line opposition by the cry of state rights.

Indiana Delegation's Vote.
The Indiana delegation voted as follows:

For suffrage—Moss, Adair, Peterson, Cline and Barnhart.
Against suffrage—Lieb, Cullop, Cox, Dixon, Gray, Korbly, Morrison and Rauch.

One of the surprises of the day came when Representative Cyrus Cline blossomed out as a full-fledged advocate of woman suffrage. In all of the polls that had been taken he had been put down as an opponent of this reform. Not only did he vote for the suffrage resolution, but he made one of the most vigorous speeches in favor of its adoption.

"The state of Indiana," he said, "permits and encourages women to engage in all lines of commercial business and professional activity. She is made personally responsible in her individual contracts and must face her creditors under her obligations with her own money."

"Very many women in the district I represent are engaged in business, capacities. Their investments represent many thousands of dollars. They own stocks and bonds and run their own business. The federal government reaches its hands into their pockets and takes out what it wants for excise and corporation taxes, regardless of their approval or disapproval."

Should Have Same Rights
"Why should not the wife or daughter whose energies, capabilities and interests are equal to those of the husband and father have the rights to protect that property?"

In his speech Representative Barnhart declared that woman suffrage will insure for peace "as against chicanery and for home and happiness as against the schemes of the wicked."

Representative Gray took the view that suffrage is a matter to be dealt with entirely by the states. Representative Lincoln Dixon, dean of the Indiana delegation, gave out a statement explaining his position against the suffrage resolution. He said in part:

"Indiana grants me the right of suffrage and is the proper power to grant equal suffrage. Some people look to the federal government as the panacea for all evils, while they refuse to assist in securing the desired result through their own local self-government by taking from my state its constitutional powers."

AN INTERESTING STATEMENT

President Wilson Mentioned in Vienna as Leader in Peace Movement.

Vienna, Jan. 13.—The Neue Freie Presse publishes a statement that President Wilson is the guiding figure in a peace movement in which Queen Wilhelmina, the Grand Duchess of Luxemburg and the Swiss president are interested.

It is also stated that the rulers of all neutral countries will be welcomed into the movement.

FRANK W. MONDELL

ALL EYES NOW ON THE STEAMER DACIA

Will She Manage to Land Her Cotton Cargo?

Washington, Jan. 13.—There is now no doubt that the expectation in London that the steamship Dacia, recently sold by the Hamburg-American line and given American registry, will be seized by the British when she takes the seas, is shared by officials here.

Though it is denied that the British ambassador has made any representations on the subject or in any way served notice on this government of the view the British government will take of the transaction, it is now accepted as certain in Washington that the British will contest her sale and transfer to American registry as invalid.

Taking on Cotton Cargo.
The Dacia is now at Galveston loading with cotton for Bremen. She is due to sail in a day or two. Before she gets to Bremen she probably will be seized by British patrols and taken to a British port for an adjudication of her case in a prize court. Inasmuch as the French prize in such cases is even more unfavorable to the case of the Dacia than that of the British, it would not be surprising if arrangements were made for the ship to be taken before a French prize court instead of a British.

The case of the Dacia is regarded here with special interest because of the administration plan to purchase other German and Austrian ships for the proposed government owned steamship line.

Should the action of the British prize court prove favorable there would undoubtedly be a rush to get control of the German and Austrian ships, in case of which holders of options could realize large profits.

STATE BOARD OF ACCOUNTS

Bill Introduced in House Would Do Away With It.

Indianapolis, Jan. 13.—Representative Foster has introduced a bill providing for the abolition of the state board of accounts and the wiping out of the public accounting law. The bill provides for placing the examinations of public officers throughout the state on a basis nearly like that existing prior to the passage of the public accounting law.

The Foster bill would empower judges of the circuit court to appoint two accountants to examine the books and records of any officer, after he has left public office, the examiners reporting to the judge on their findings.

Insurgents Besiege Durazzo.

Athens, July 13.—The Albanian insurgents have occupied the heights of Ruzop, near Durazzo, and are placing guns in a position to command the harbor and the Italian warships in the harbor and the Italian marines and bluejackets who were landed to protect Italian interests are reported to be preparing to resist any general assault on the city.

Yeggs Overlook a Chance.

Rochester, Ind., Jan. 13.—Yeggs who blew the safe in the postoffice at Akron, ten miles east of here, escaped with about $20 in cash, leaving a large number of stamps and money orders. The men stole a horse and buggy to make their "get away" and no trace of them has been found.

Death of General Burt.

Washington, Jan. 13.—Brigadier General Andrew S. Burt, U. S. A., retired, veteran of the civil, Spanish, Philippine and a number of Indian wars, died suddenly here of heart disease. He was a native of Cincinnati and was seventy-five years old.

No More Burlesque Shows.

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 13.—Acting on the advice of the Ministerial association, Mayor Benjamin Bosse has put the "lid" on burlesque shows in Evansville, and it is understood no more such "attractions" are to appear here during the present administration.

DEMURRERS TO PAVE THE WAY

Plan to Carry Terre Haute Cases Higher.

ACTION IN FEDERAL COURT

Eighty of the Defendants in Alleged Election Conspiracy Cases Plead Guilty, Nine Plead Not Guilty and Twenty-Five File Demurrers on Which to Base an Appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Indianapolis, Jan. 13.—The following action was taken when 114 Terre Haute Democrats were arraigned in the United States district court here on the indictment for conspiracy to defraud the federal government at the election when a congressman and senator were to be elected: Eighty of them pleaded guilty, nine pleaded not guilty and twenty-five filed a demurrer. The twenty-five included Mayor Donn Roberts, Judge Eli Redman, Sheriff Dennis Shea, City Judge Thomas Smith, City Controller Elmer Talbot and other higher ups, who have employed A. O. Stanley, the Kentucky congressman, to make the fight on the jurisdiction of the federal court, it being the first instance of the assertion of federal jurisdiction over the election machinery provided by a state. The eighty who pleaded guilty have made confessions which place guilt upon all for whom the demurrer was filed.

Told to Go Home.

Judge Anderson told these eighty they could go home to remain until called for by the district attorney. The judge was willing to give Attorney Stanley time to prepare argument and the latter fixed Jan. 20. The defense expects to go to the United States supreme court with the question of jurisdiction if necessary. While the mayor and most of the executive heads of his administration were in Indianapolis, the Democratic city council of Terre Haute, at one time obedient to his will, passed a boundary ordinance he opposed and instructed his board of public works to abandon the paving policy of the mayor and the city attorney to compromise litigation growing out of that policy.

It develops that there are twelve indictments on which warrants are yet to be served. It is said the accused are Republicans. The district attorney has said the Republican conspiracy was as fraudulent but not so extensive as that of the Democrats.

FLOOD PROTECTION URGED

Emergency Commission Has Report Ready For Governor

Indianapolis, Jan. 13.—That floods are a constant menace to several important cities of Indiana and that there should be no delay in establishing protection against a repetition of the high waters is a finding of the state flood commission, which is ready to report to Governor Ralston. E. W. Shirk of Peru is chairman of the commission.

The tangible losses from the flood of March, 1913, reached approximately $25,000,000, according to the commission's estimate, and the damage to the county bridges and highways alone was more than $3,000,000.

The commission declares that a factor of vital importance in connection with the prevention of flood damage is the necessity not alone of wise provisions for the study of the flood problem in Indiana, but of a wise regulation of flood preventive works so that they may not, while benefiting the particular locality for which they are designed, work hardship or damage on the other localities, and so that, by the combining of the resources and activities of separate localities, in many cases more satisfactory protection may be obtained at a lower cost.

STILL VOTING FOR SPEAKER

Illinois House on the Second Week of Its Deadlock.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 13.—There is little prospect that the deadlock will be broken, and that a speaker will be elected this week in the lower house of the legislature, which is on its second week of balloting. Walter M. Provine of Taylorville, the Republican caucus nominee, has received 62 votes, fifteen short of the number needed for election. Lee O'Neill Browne is leading the Democrats with 32 votes, one short of the highest number he received last week.

Enters Plea of Insanity.

Frankfort, Ind., Jan. 13.—William McCoy, who, Dec. 1, shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Norma McCoy, and John Byerly, whom he found at his home, appeared in court and entered a plea of not guilty. He also filed a written plea, in which he asserted that at the time of the commission of the alleged crime he was of unsound mind. Judge Combs set the case for trial on Feb. 8.

Brussels Rumor Discredited.

London, Jan. 13.—Stories that Brussels has been set on fire and was burning, which were brought to Amsterdam by refugees and later wired here, are discredited at the offices of the Belgian relief organization and at the Belgian legation. It is said here that there is no confirmation whatever of the reports.

GERMAN ARMIES ARE REPELLING ADVANCES

Gains Reported On Both Battle Fronts.

London, Jan. 13.—From the latest official accounts Germans are reported to be throwing great masses of troops into Alsace, and Berlin claims that the French invasion has been checked, for the time being at least. The French official report says that all is quiet in Alsace, that at Soissons more ground has been gained, despite German counter attacks, and that the allied artillery has proved its superiority at several points. The French admit that the Germans have gained a foothold in defensive works in the Argonne, and say that fighting for offensive positions is now going on.

The German general staff announces that in northern Poland a forward movement of the Russians was checked.

The Hodeida incident will probably soon be closed, judging by the latest developments. Turkey has now definitely accepted all of Italy's demands, including a military salute to the Italian flag when it is again hoisted over the consulate where it was hauled down by the consul after the violation of the building by the arrest of the British vice consul, who had taken refuge there. The Italian consul after ordering the flag down, took refuge on board an Italian warship.

It is reported in Petrograd that the Russian army which advanced into Transylvania will effect a junction with the Serbians. The belief now is that the German troops sent to aid in a campaign against Serbia will be used to protect Hungary from invasion.

SETTLED IT OUT OF COURT

Young Woman School Teacher Dismisses Breach of Promise Suit.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., Jan. 13.—The $15,000 damage suit filed by Miss Garnetta E. Rubble, aged twenty-three, a rural school teacher, against Orala T. Halgarth, aged forty-one, a wealthy stock raiser and farmer, for breach of promise, has been settled, the court costs paid and the case dismissed from the records. James A. Connelly, attorney for the plaintiff, said she accidentally met the defendant at a religious meeting recently, a reconciliation was brought about by a mutual friend, and that Halgarth announced his intention of fulfilling his marriage contract and paying all of the costs in the case if Miss Rubble would dismiss the suit and become his bride. The wedding is to be celebrated within a few weeks.

"CULPABLE NEGLIGENCE"

New York Elevated's Officers Held by Coroner's Jury.

New York, Jan. 13.—Theodore P. Shonts, president of the Interborough, Frank Hedley, general manager and vice president of the road; Horace M. Fisher, secretary; and ten directors of the company were held responsible for the deaths of two persons killed on Dec. 9, in the elevated collision at 116th street and Eighth avenue.

The jury brought in a verdict of "culpable negligence" which, according to Coroner Riordan, is equivalent in criminal law to a charge of manslaughter in the second degree.

A "Cleaning Up" at South Bend.

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 13.—South Bend's anti-vice crusade, which began with the arrest of forty-one men and women, grew in importance when the police dragnet which has been spread over the city drew in fourteen more men, eight of them the most prominent druggists of the city, all charged with operating "blind tigers."

Big Lafayette Assured.

West Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 13.—The registration at the farmers' short course at Purdue university continues to be heavy and a record-breaking attendance this year is practically an assured thing.

The federal court in California has declared the Arizona alien employee law unconstitutional.

LEGISLATURE IS PUSHING ALONG

Committees Begin the Consideration of Bills.

SEVERAL OF IMPORTANCE

Among These Is a Measure Designed to Secure to Indiana Only "Eugenic" Marriages and to Put a Ban on the Common Drinking Cup, a Measure That Was Passed Two Years Ago but Was Vetoed by the Governor.

Indianapolis, Jan. 13.—Committees of the senate are actively entering on the business of the session. Five of them held meetings and recommended for passage ten bills, almost one-half of the total number before the senate. The bills recommended follow:

Provision for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people. This is the measure to validate the election of senators under the new amendment to the federal constitution.

Abolishment of capital punishment. Provision for payment by the county of $50 for the burial of the wife or widow of a soldier or sailor.

Abolishment of the common drinking cup in public places. This is a bill that was vetoed by the governor two years ago.

Provision for eugenic marriages. Requirement of private burials in the cases of death by certain stipulated contagious diseases.

Provision for the recording of wills while the testator is still living and to guard against contests.

Division of inheritance taxes between the county and state and provision of penalties for failure to settle promptly.

Legalizing of bonds already sold for gravel roads and on which roads the work has been done.

Reduction of school treasurers' bonds to the amounts of the funds in their hands at any one time.

Important Bills on List.

The senators had on their list several bills that are of general interest and more than ordinary importance. Those included Senator Neal's bill to require health certificates for applicants for a marriage license, Senator Reidelbach's bill to abolish the present registration law, Senator VanAuker's proposal to establish a state conservation commission to consolidate and unify the work now being carried on under several state departments, and Senator White's bill to banish the common drinking cup from public buildings and places.

The senate passed the house appropriation bill, after amending it in such a way that it will repeal the law of 1895 regulating the employment of help by the legislature. This is the law under which several legislators and employees were indicted recently, all being discharged later when the law was declared to be unconstitutional. The amendment to the appropriation bill made by the senate must be adopted by the house before the law of 1895 is repealed.

Suffrage Measure Fails.

The house ditched the woman suffrage resolution by failure to hold an afternoon session at which the resolution was set for consideration.

In his message to the legislature Governor Ralston spoke at length on the matter of taxation. Richard M. Milburn, attorney general, has been ordered by the governor to prepare a bill embodying the views of the governor on the subject and is working at it. It is not known who will introduce the measure in the house.

Senator Neal's eugenic bill would make it unlawful to issue a marriage license to any person applying for the license without a certificate from a physician in the county in which the person lives showing that the person is not of unsound mind, feeble minded, afflicted with tuberculosis or any transmissible disease. It provides that it shall be the duty of the state board of health to prescribe the form of the certificate and other regulations relative to the examination.

A penalty imposing a fine of not less than $25 and costs and making mandatory a term of imprisonment of not less than ten days against a physician for making a false certificate or a clerk for issuing a license without the certificate is provided in the bill. Neal introduced a similar bill two years ago, but it made no progress.

EXPLOSION WRECKS HOUSE

Acetylene Tank Lets Go With Disastrous Results.

Anderson, Ind., Jan. 13.—Chauncey House, thirty years old, and his brother, Burley House, twenty-five, were injured seriously when an acetylene tank in the basement of their home near Perkinsville exploded with a report that was heard for five miles. The house was destroyed by fire with $2,500 loss. Neighbors found the young men lying unconscious just outside the burning house.

Murder Trial at Madison.

PEACE ON THE BORDER SEEMS NOW ASSURED

No More Firing Across the Line, Say Mexicans.

Washington, Jan. 13.—Government officials here are greatly pleased at reports from Brigadier General Scott at Naco to the effect that Generals Hilt and Maytorena, representing Carranza and Villa respectively, have signed the agreement by which Mexican ports on the United States border at Arizona are to be neutralized and the American towns saved from the menace of firing across the line.

Fighting Continues.

Elsewhere in Mexico the situation continues quite as chaotic as ever, according to state department reports. Fighting continues between Carranza and Villa troops between Monterey and Saltillo, and Villa is said to have gained some advantage. Communications in that region are now almost completely broken.

At Mexico City the reassembled convention which has been meeting in desultory fashion for nearly two weeks is reported as having accomplished nothing and to be still talking about credentials. The convention decided that any military leaders who had been killed since the meeting at Aguas Calientes were still entitled to a vote in the assembly. Who is to name the dead men's successors is not stated in the reports.

PROHIBITION FOR CAPITAL

Movement on In the Senate to Make Washington "Dry."

Washington, Jan. 13.—The senate came within three votes of attaching to the District of Columbia appropriation bill an amendment making the national capital a "dry" city.

The vote came as the result of a resolution by Senator Sheppard of Texas to suspend the rules of the senate and amend the District of Columbia appropriation bill by adding a prohibition resolution.

The motion was met by a counter-motion by Senator Hoke Smith to refer the Sheppard resolution to the senate committee on rules. The Smith motion prevailed, 37 to 34. Within two hours after the vote had been taken a hurried meeting of the rules committee was called and the Sheppard resolution reported favorably back to the senate. As soon as the resolution got back in the senate, Senator Sheppard asked for its immediate consideration. Senator Lodge objected, thus causing it to lie over for a day.

CHURCH GROWING PRACTICAL.
In the editorial columns of the Indianapolis Times which have been in charge of the ministers of Indianapolis for a week we find the following:

The churches have often been charged with being weak and impractical in their methods of work. Too frequently men of large business affairs have kept aloof from the church because the methods of the church did not appeal to them in any sense. That day is rapidly passing. Our ministers and religious leaders have been introducing modern methods more and more into the affairs of the church. Our churches are becoming highly organized and the work is thoroughly systematized, so that the old-time criticism is no longer pertinent. The modern minister studies business and is in most instances a practical business man. This fact, however, has not made him in any degree less efficient as prophet and teacher. The church today is emphasizing a practical religion. It says that the religious teachings of Jesus must find practical application in the lives of all men and in the relations of life. It says that the secret of happiness is in living and doing and serving. It says that to love God and your neighbor, to love mercy and do justly and walk humbly is the whole duty of man. The church is now organizing practically to make his dream come true, and its program is large enough and reasonable enough and vigorous enough to command the respect and support of all strong men.—Indianapolis Times.

President Wilson's position on the labor problem is rather unique. In one breath he asserts that there is nothing wrong with business but "the state of mind" and in another he urges that the government provide means of caring for the unemployed.

PRZEMYSL, ISLAND IN RUSSIAN FLOOD

Steel Forts in Austrian City Have Been Able to Hold Out Against Enemy's Fire.

OUTER DEFENSES ABANDONED

Daily Wireless Message, "We're Still Holding Out," May Not be Sent in Short Time.

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Buda Pesth, December 2. (By Mail to New York.—What's the use of wishing good luck to a man who's going to die? There's no luck about it.

But I did it, just the same, in those last two days at Przemyśl; in those last forty-eight hours before we piled helter skelter out of the city, before the Russian onrush. It was hard business, too. These men were going to stay in the city, to defend it. There were thousands of us who had been ordered out but these men were of the few thousands who had been ordered to remain and to fight to the last drop of their blood. They couldn't go. They must hold Przemyśl or die.

I had dined thrice daily for some weeks with some of these officers who had received the orders to remain and saying good-bye to them was one of the hardest things I've ever had to do. I knew their smiles, I knew their voices, I knew their jokes, their favorite wines, their favorite cigarettes, something about this fellow's home life, something about this chap's three children, I had dipped into their lives just enough to know and to form friendships. And then the end of the Russian line began to snap around the circle of Przemyśl's forts, like a whip around a sapling, and Przemyśl was doomed. And that last evening, when I said good-bye to these men, who must stay in Przemyśl through the siege, my smile must have been glassy.

I saw one of them once more. It was the next morning, at 7 o'clock, in the Przemyśl cathedral, barely daylight. The evening before, the man who is to be the next emperor of Austria, had come into Przemyśl in his automobile, after a hundred mile ride. He had come to go to church with these men; to join them in a farewell mass; to say "good-bye" to them and to tell them that Austria Hungary depended on them to hold the forts of Przemyśl or die in their wreckage.

And, in this the audience of officers, I saw a few of my Austrian officer friends, earnest-faced, devout, kneeling, bowing, crossing themselves, reading the prayers, partaking in the death-mass with a man for whose kingdom-to-be they were going to give their lives. I thought of the storm of Russian shell and shrapnel that would beat over Przemyśl as soon as our batteries had been brought in from the outskirts and this quiet mass seemed to me like the moment of calm before a tornado.

When the mass was ended the emperor-to-be climbed into his auto and was whirled out of the rings of forts a hundred miles away to the safe shelter of the Carpathians at Neu Sandec. The streets of Przemyśl were filled with marching soldiers. They had been brought in from the rifle trenches some miles outside the city and were to be rushed away from Przemyśl to some other part of the line; at least were not to die in Przemyśl. Then, later in the morning, the artillery began to come into

VAN NUYS SAID ACT OF 1895 IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Democratic Floor Leader Replies to Criticism of Senator Robinson, Republican Leader.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, January 13—Senator Van Nuys, democratic floor leader of the senate, today replied on the floor to the criticism directed at the senate majority yesterday by Senator Robinson, republican floor leader, for passage of the resolution which repealed the act of 1895—the act under which thirteen members of the 1913 legislature were recently indicted and which was declared unconstitutional by Judge Markey in Marion criminal court.

"There was no intention to let down the bars and employ more men than are needed," he said, "but the act is unconstitutional because one legislature has no power to govern succeeding legislatures. Each is sovereign. Conditions have changed since 1895 and more employees are needed. The senate already has passed a resolution providing that the employment committee shall file with the assistant secretary of the senate a list of all the employees. This will be a public record," said Senator Van Nuys.

Reversed the Verdict.

A prominent citizen of a large town went raging into the electric light company's office and declared that one of their wires had killed a pet tree on his premises.

"That tree," said he, "has been standing there for twenty years, and we regarded it as one of the family. My children played under it when they were babies, and it is associated with some of the pleasantest memories of my life. When it began to die we all mourned, and we could not imagine what ailed it until yesterday, when I noticed that a wire was lying right across a branch. My poor tree has been electrocuted, and I feel as if murder has been done in my house."

Considerably moved, the agent of the company went to view the scene of the tragedy and found the tree still alive, but feeble. When he came to trace the wire he discovered one end nailed to the roof of an old barn and the other twisted around a discarded pole. It had been cut off for at least two years and forgotten. But the occasion demanded something, so he made the following report:

"Tree alive; wire dead. Wire evidently killed by tree. Bill inclosed."

The Look.

Look up and not down. There is never a crown.
In the dust and debris of the street.
The God who doth love us hath hung high above us
The crown that makes glory complete.

Face the east, not the west. You are not at your best
With your eyes set on stars sinking low.
But each rising star's ray, with its promise of day,
Will kindle your heart to a glow.

He Was "It."

When my wife and I were on our honeymoon we were advised to visit a certain ruined castle, the custodian of which was a relative of the noble owner. Having viewed the glorious old pile, I was at a loss how and in what way to offer a gratuity, bearing in mind the "blue blood" of our guide. The following conversation took place: "We thank you for your courtesy and would be glad to give a small sum to any cause if you have a box for that purpose." "Sir," was the reply, "we have such a box." "Then may I see it?" I asked. "Sir," with a pleasant smile and a bow, "I am the box."—Strand Magazine.

Tibet's Sacred Mountain.

Two religious sects who hated one another bitterly were found by Sven Hedin in Tibet. Searching for the cause of this aversion, he found that one of the sects believed that the prayer wheel should turn to the right, while the other was convinced that the wheel should turn to the left.

In the region of the Bramaputra he found a mountain which is so sacred that whoever walks around it thirteen times has all his sins forgiven. The result of this belief is that criminals from far and near infest this region. When Sven Hedin started to ride around this mountain on his horse the pilgrims informed him that that would do him no good.

He Went Alone.

Della, the quick witted, was on her way home the other night. It was late, and the street was lonely, and Della is comely. A would be gallant sidled up to Della and said, "May I walk home with you?" Della turned on him frank and fearless eyes and asked: "Why? Are you afraid to go alone?" Can any beauty who tells plaintive tales of persistent "mashers" beat that for effective repartee?

And what became of the would be gallant? "Shure he wint off so quick I only saw the tails of his coat turnin' the corner," said Della as she wiped the soap suds off her arms.—New York Globe.

STORIES THAT THRILL FROM BATTLEFIELDS OF EUROPE

Two Young Frenchwomen
Poison Husbands to Save Lives of Garrison.

Correspondent in Treetop
Tells How He Feels as Shells Whistle By.

SOME of the latest stories from the battle front in Europe include the following:

How two young Frenchwomen poisoned the husbands they loved to save the lives of an entire garrison has just been made known in Paris. The story created a tremendous sensation.

Rose and Marie Dupont, twins, were born and reared at Villerupt, a small village on the Lorraine frontier. In 1912 they married two students of chemistry named Ulrich and Wilhelm, who loved them so much that they became French citizens. The men bought a drug store at Villerupt.

Both unions were most happy until July 29 of last year, when the husbands received a letter from across the frontier. Immediately both became nervous and asked their wives to go to their grandmother's home in Longwy until the situation cleared. The young women went to Longwy, but found that their grandmother was not at home. They returned late the next day to Villerupt.

When they arrived at the drug store, it is related, they found it closed. Going through the back garden, they peered through the closed shutters and, to their amazement, saw their husbands talking in quite a friendly manner to two Germans in full uniform.

The young women learned that a plot had been arranged by Ulrich and Wilhelm. They had stored a large quantity of strychnine, and in the night it was planned to drop it in the wine casks reserved for the French garrison.

"Are you sure the dose is strong enough?" asked one of the Germans. "Why," answered Ulrich, "it is strong enough to kill all the garrison and its reserves!"

Those shuddered and almost fainted. "We must act," said Marie, "to prevent this most awful crime, even if we must commit one ourselves."

Half an hour later they rang the front doorbell. They appeared most joyous, and they explained their elation by saying they had heard the war had been averted. They said they were so glad that they wanted to set out some wine in honor of peace and the friendly German soldiers.

Marie went out and brought back a champagne bottle. She poured the liquid, and the men drank it. Next morning the young women ran out of the house. They were widows, for they themselves had employed the poison. They went straight to the chief of the gendarmes and told of their plight. They were set free at once.

"We have killed our husbands," they cried. "Do what is right with us!"

But the official simply wept with them and kissed them, for it was found that the plot had been craftily laid and that the sacrifice of the wives had saved hundreds of French troops from death.

Songs the Shells Sing.

Considering the subject, not only from the walls of Berru, but also from our treetop in the Bavarian camp, it becomes my earnest belief that it is not the bang of shells that makes a civilian ponder on the nature of his past life, but their preliminary conversation, says a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune.

For a shell is the most loquacious of devices. It can say more in ten seconds and say it in more ways than an ordinarily receptive mind could assimilate in ten minutes. It sings, it whistles, it crackles, it chatters, and then it goes bang! It has various accents, and it drops into the most unexpected dialects. But nobody appears to have any difficulty in comprehending all it says.

Often it mispronounces some of the simplest words. I have heard several shells utter the word "you" as if it were spelled "yew," precisely like a Yankee comedian. This would be when the shell was remarking in—as I thought—the most pointed manner, "I am coming to get yew—yew—yew."

Pens What They Say.

In the treetop I tried to set down on a piece of paper words that would stand for the sounds the shells were making. At the moment I thought I was cutting quite a literary dash, but upon later examination the results did not seem very brilliant. But they were the only results I had and as I had come across the ocean to get them they at least represented the expenditure of a good deal of time.

So here they are:

The shell said, "I am coming to get you, and I am coming to get you now." That part was in a kind of remote singing—hardly more than a murmur.

war, I could at least take a chance upon occasion.

His reply was more encouraging than I had hoped for.

"Now that you speak of it," he said slowly, "I have no stomach for high places either. That is why I did not join you in the tree."

Then a ray of light illuminated by reflections on the subject of soldier courage, and I decided that it took a saner kind of courage to decline the invitation to climb the tree, this man having no duty to perform there, than it would have taken to have accepted it.

Eriton Praises Germans.

The Hon. Aubrey Herbert, M. P. for South Somerset, a lieutenant in the Irish guards, describing his experience in north France, says:

"I was shot and was found by some German privates after about an hour and a half.

"With other wounded men and officers I was taken away to a house that had been converted into a temporary hospital for eleven days, until the French occupied the village where we lay and set us at liberty.

"It is only fair to say that both on the battlefield and subsequently we were all shown courtesy and great kindness by the Germans, from all ranks, from Prussians and Bavarians alike."

The New War Weapon.

A French doctor, who has just returned from Flanders, describing the effect of the "Fleche d'aero," as the steel darts with which the French air men are supplied are called, said:

"Among the 2,000 wounded whom we treated in forty-eight hours was a German who had been struck by an aeroplane dart. He was evidently bending over when hit, for the dart had entered the right thigh and traversed the whole leg, so that the point emerged just above the boot. The man was conscious when he was brought in and said he felt no pain, only a heavy blow. He died soon after."

CHAPTER X.

Early that year, the touch of autumn came to the air. Often, returning at sundown from the afternoon life class, Samson felt the lure of its melancholy sweetness, and paused on one of the Washington Square benches, with many vague things stirring in his mind. He felt with a stronger throb the surety of young, but quickening, abilities within himself. Partly, it was the charm of Indian summer, partly a sense of growing with the days, but, also, though he had not as yet realized that, it was the new friendship into which Adrienne had admitted him, and the new experience of frank camaraderie with a woman not as a member of an inferior sex, but as an equal companion of brain and soul. He had seen her often, and usually alone, because he shunned meetings with strangers. Until his education had advanced further, he wished to avoid social embarrassments. He knew that she liked him, and realized that it was because he was a new and virile type, and for that reason a diversion—a sort of human novelty. She liked him, too, because it was rare for a man to offer her friendship without making love, and she was certain he would not make love. He liked her for the same reasons that every one else did—because she was herself. Of late, too, he had met a number of men at Lescott's club. He was modestly surprised to find that, though his attitude on these occasions was always that of one sitting in the background, the men seemed to like him, and, when they said, "See you again," at parting, it was with the convincing manner of real friendliness.

One wonderful afternoon in October, when the distances were mist-hung, and the skies very clear, Samson sat across the table from Adrienne Lescott at a road house on the Sound. The sun had set through great cloud battalions massed against the west, and the horizon was fading into darkness through a haze like ash of roses. She had picked him up on the Avenue, and taken him into her car for a short spin, but the afternoon had beguiled them, luring them on a little farther, and still a little farther. When they were a score of miles from Manhattan, the car had suddenly broken down. It would, the chauffeur told them, be the matter of an hour to effect repairs, so the girl, explaining to the boy that this event gave the affair the aspect of adventure, turned and led the way, on foot, to the nearest road house.

"We will telephone that we shall be late, and then have dinner," she laughed. "And for me to have dinner with you alone, unchaperoned at a country inn, is by New York standards delightfully unconventional. It borders on wickedness." Then, since their attitude toward each other was so friendly and innocent, they both laughed. They had dined under the trees of an old manor house, built a century ago, and now converted into an inn, and they had enjoyed themselves because it seemed to them pleasingly paradoxical that they should find in a place seemingly so shabby-genteel a cuisine and service of such excellence. Neither of them had ever been there before, and neither of them knew that the reputation of this establishment was in its own way wide—and unsavory.

The repairs did not go as smoothly as the chauffeur had expected, and when he had finished, he was hungry. So, eleven o'clock found them still chatting at their table on the lighted lawn. After awhile, they fell silent, and Adrienne noticed that her companion's face had become deeply, almost painfully set, and that his gaze was tensely focused on herself.

"What is it, Mr. South?" she demanded.

The young man began to speak, in a steady, self-accusing voice.

"I was sitting here, looking at you," he said, bluntly. "I was thinking how fine you are in every way; how there is as much difference in the texture of men and women as there is in the texture of clothes. From that automobile cap you wear to your slippers and stockings, you are clad in silk. From your brain to the tone of your voice, you are woven of human silk. I've learned lately that silk isn't weak, but strong. They make the best balloons of it." He paused and laughed, but his face again became sober. "I was thinking, too, of your mother. She must be sixty, but she's a young woman. Her face is smooth and unwrinkled, and her heart is still in bloom. At the same age, George won't be much older than he is now."

The compliment was so obviously not intended as compliment at all that the girl flushed with pleasure.

"Then," went on Samson, his face slowly drawing with pain, "I was thinking of my own people. My mother was about forty when she died. She was an old woman. My father was forty-three. He was an old man. I was thinking how they withered under their drudgery—and of the monstrous injustice of it all."

Adrienne Lescott nodded. Her eyes were sweetly sympathetic.

"It's the hardship of the conditions," she said, softly. "Those conditions will change."

A man had come out onto the veranda from the inside, and was approaching the table. He was immaculately groomed, and came forward with the deference of approaching throne, yet as one accustomed to approaching thrones. His smile was that of pleased surprise.

The mountaineer recognized Farbish, and with a quick hardening of the face, he recalled their last meeting. If Farbish should presume to renew the acquaintanceship under these circumstances, Samson meant to rise from his chair, and strike him in the face. George Lescott's sister could not be subjected to such meetings. Yet, it was a tribute to his advancement in good manners that he dreaded making a scene in her presence, and, as a warning, he met Farbish's pleasant smile with a look of blank and studied lack of recognition. The circumstances out of which Farbish might weave unpleasant gossip did not occur to Samson. That they were together late in the evening, unchaperoned, at a road house whose reputation was socially dubious, was a thing he did not realize. But Farbish was keenly alive to the possibilities of the situation. He chose to construe the Kentuckian's blank expression as annoyance at being discovered, a sentiment he could readily understand. Adrienne Lescott, following her companion's eyes, looked up, and to the boy's astonishment nodded to the newcomer, and called him by name.

"Mr. Farbish," she laughed, "with mock confusion and total innocence of the fact that her words might have meaning, 'don't tell on us.'"

"I never tell things, my dear lady," said the newcomer. "I have dwelt

"I Was Thinking of My People."

too long in conservatories to toss pebbles. I'm afraid, Mr. South, you have forgotten me. I'm Farbish, you have forgotten me. I'm Farbish, and I had the pleasure of meeting you!" he paused a moment, then with a pointed glance added—"at the Manhattan club, was it not?"

"It was not," said Samson, promptly. Farbish looked his surprise, but was resolved to see no offense, and, after a few moments of affable and, it must be acknowledged, witty conversation, withdrew to his own table.

"Where did you meet that man?" demanded Samson, fiercely, when he and the girl were alone again.

"Oh, at any number of dinners and dances. His sort is tolerated for some reason." She paused, then, looking very directly at the Kentuckian, inquired, "And where did you meet him?"

"Didn't you hear him say the Manhattan club?"

"Yes, and I knew that he was lying."

"Yes, he was!" Samson spoke, contemptuously. "Never mind where it was. It was a place I got out of when I found out who were there."

The chauffeur came to announce that the car was ready, and they went out. Farbish watched them with a smile that had in it a trace of the sardonic.

The career of Farbish had been an interesting one in its own peculiar and unadmirable fashion. With no advantages of upbringing, he had nevertheless cultivated the niceties of social usage that his one flaw was a too great perfection. He was letter-perfect where one to the manor born might have slurred some detail.

He was witty, handsome in his saturnine way, and had powerful friends in the world of fashion and finance. That he rendered services to his plutocratic patrons, other than the repartee of his dinner talk, was a thing vaguely hinted in club gossip, and that these services were not to his credit had more than once been conjectured.

When Horton had begun his crusade against various abuses, he had cast a suspicious eye on all matters through which he could trace the trail of William Farbish, and now, when Farbish saw Horton, he eyed him with an enigmatical expression, half-quizzical and half-malevolent.

After Adrienne and Samson had disappeared, he rejoined his companion, a stout, middle-aged gentleman of florid complexion, whose chevot cut-away and reposeful waistcoat covered a liberal embonpoint. Farbish took his cigar from his lips, and studied its ascending smoke through lids half-closed and thoughtful.

"Singular," he mused; "very singular!"

"What's singular?" impatiently demanded his companion. "Finish, or don't start."

"That mountaineer came up here as George Lescott's protégé," went on Farbish, reflectively. "He came fresh from the feud belt, and landed promptly in the police court. Now, in less than a year, he's pairing off with Adrienne Lescott—who, every one supposed, meant to marry Wilfred Horton. This little party tonight is, to put it quite mildly, a bit unconventional."

The stout gentleman said nothing, and the other questioned, musingly: "By the way, Bradburn, has the Kenmore Shooting club requested Wilfred Horton's resignation yet?"

"Not yet. We are going to. He's not congenial, since his hand is raised against every man who owns more than two dollars." The speaker owned several million times that sum. This meeting at an out-of-the-way place had been arranged for the purpose of discussing ways and means of curbing Wilfred's crusades.

"Well, don't do it."

"Why the devil shouldn't we? We don't want anarchists in the Kenmore."

After awhile, they sat silent, Farbish smiling over the plot he had just devised, and the other man puffing with a puzzled expression at his cigar.

"That's all there is to it," summarized Mr. Farbish, succinctly. "If we can get these two men, South and Horton, together down there at the shooting lodge, under the proper conditions, they'll do the rest themselves. I think, I'll take care of South. Now, it's up to you to have Horton there at the same time."

"How do you know these men have not already met—and amicably?" demanded Mr. Bradburn.

"I happen to know it, quite by chance. It is my business to know things—quite by chance!"

Indian summer came again to Misery, flaunting woodland banners of crimson and scarlet orange, but to Sally the season brought only heart-achy remembrances of last autumn, when Samson had softened his stoicism as the haze had softened the horizon. He had sent her a few brief letters—not written, but plainly printed. He selected short words—as much like the primer as possible, for no other messages could she read. There were times in plenty when he wished to pour out to her torrents of feeling, and it was such feeling as would have carried comfort to her lonely little heart. He wished to tell frankly of what a good friend he had made, and how this friendship made him more able to realize that other feeling—his love for Sally. There was in his mind no suspicion—as yet—that these two girls might ever stand in conflict as to the right-of-way. But the letters he wished to write were not the sort he cared to have read to the girl by the evangelist-doctor or the district-school teacher, and alone she could have made nothing of them. However, "I love you" are easy words—and those he always included.

The Widow Miller had been ailing for months, and, though the local physician diagnosed the condition as being "right palsy," he knew that the specter of tuberculosis which stalks through these badly lighted and ventilated houses was stretching out its fingers to touch her shrunken chest. This had meant that Sally had to forego the evening hours to study, because of the weariness that followed the day of nursing and household drudgery. Autumn seemed to bring to her mother a slight improvement, and Sally could again sometimes steal away with her slate and book, to sit alone on the big boulder, and study.

She would not be able to write that Christmas letter. There had been too many interruptions in the self-imposed education, but some day she would write. There would probably be time enough. It would take even Samson a long while to become an artist.

One day, as she was walking homeward from her lonely trysting place, she met the battered-looking man who carried medicines in his saddlebags and the Scriptures in his pocket, and who practiced both forms of healing through the hills. The old man drew down his nag, and threw one leg over the pommel.

"Evenin', Sally," he greeted.

"Evenin', Brother Spencer. How air ye?"

"Tolable, thank ye, Sally." The body-and-soul mender studied the girl awhile in silence, and then said bluntly:

"Ye've done broke right smart, in the last year. Anything the matter with ye?"

She shook her head, and laughed. It was an effort to laugh merrily, but the ghost of the old instinctive blitheness rippled into it.

"I've jest come from old Spicer South's," volunteered the doctor. "He's aillin' pretty consid'able, these days."

"What's the matter with Unc' Spicer?" demanded the girl, in genuine anxiety. Every eye along Misery called the old man Unc' Spicer.

"I can't jest make out," Her informant spoke slowly, and his brow corrugated into something like sullenness. "He ain't jest to say sick. That is, his organs seems all right, but he don't 'pear to have no heart for nothin', and his victuals don't tempt him none. He's jest purty, thet's all."

"I'll go over thar, an' see him," announced the girl. "I'll cook a chicken thet'll tempt him."

The girl spent much time after that at the house of old Spicer South, and her coming seemed to waken him into a fitful return of spirits.

"I reckon, Unc' Spicer," suggested the girl, on one of her first visits, "I'd better send fer Samson. Mobby hit mout, do ye good ter see him."

"That's the specific charge, is it?"

"Yes, that's the specific charge, Mr. South may be a man of unusual talent and strength. But—he has done what no other man has done—with you. He has caused club gossip, which may easily be twisted and misconstrued."

The old man was weakly leaning back on his chair, and his eyes were vacantly listless; but, at the suggestion, he straightened, and the ancient fire came again to his face.

"Don't ye do hit," he exclaimed, almost fiercely. "I knows ye mean hit kindly, Sally, but don't ye meddle in my business."

"I—I didn't 'low ter meddle," faltered the girl.

"No, little gal." His voice softened at once into gentleness. "I knows ye didn't. I didn't mean ter be short-answered with ye either, but thar's jest one thing I won't 'low nobody ter do—an' thet's ter send fer Samson. He knows the road home, an', when he wants ter come, he'll find the door open, but we hain't a-goin' ter send after him."

Wilfred Horton found himself that fall in the position of a man whose course lies through rapids, and for the first time in his life his pleasures were giving precedence to business.

Horton was the most-hated and most-admired man in New York, but the men who hated and snubbed him were his own sort, and the men who admired him were those whom he would never meet, and who knew him only through the columns of penny papers. Powerful enemies had ceased to laugh, and begun to conspire. He must be silenced! How, was a mooted question.

"Don't You Do Hit."

tion. But, in some fashion, he must be silenced. Society had not cast him out, but society had shown him in many subtle ways that he was no longer her favorite. He had taken a plebeian stand with the masses. Meanwhile, from various sources, Horton had received warnings of actual personal danger. But at these he had laughed, and no hint of them had reached Adrienne's ears.

One evening, when business had forced the postponement of a dinner engagement with Miss Lescott, he begged her over the telephone to ride with him the following morning.

"I know you are usually asleep when I'm out and galloping," he laughed, "but you pitched me neck and crop into this hurly-burly, and I shouldn't have to lose everything. Don't have your horse brought. I want you to try out a new one of mine."

"I think," she answered, "that early morning is the best time to ride. I'll meet you at seven at the Plaza entrance."

They had turned the upper end of the reservoir before Horton drew his mount to a walk, and allowed the reins to hang. They had been galloping hard, and conversation had been impracticable.

"I suppose experience should have taught me," began Horton, slowly, "that the most asinine thing in the world is to try to lecture you, Drennie. But there are times when one must even risk your delight at one's discomfiture."

"I'm not going to tease you this morning," she answered, docilely. "I like the horse too well—and, to be frank, I like you too well!"

"Thank you," smiled Horton. "As usual, you disarm me on the verge of combat. I had nerved myself for ridicule."

"What have I done now?" inquired the girl, with an innocence which further disarmed him.

"The queen can do no wrong. But even the queen, perhaps more particularly the queen, must give thought to what people are saying."

"What are people saying?"

"The usual unjust things that are said about women in society. You are being constantly seen with an uncouth freak who is scarcely a gentleman, however much he may be a man. And malicious tongues are wagging."

The girl stiffened.

"I won't spar with you. I know that you are alluding to Samson South, though the description is a slander. I never thought it would be necessary to say such a thing to you, Wilfred, but you are talking like a cad."

The young man flushed.

"I laid myself open to that," he said, slowly, "and I suppose I should have expected it. God knows I hate cads and snobs. Mr. South is simply, as yet, uncivilized. Otherwise, he would hardly take you, unchaperoned, to—well, let us say to ultra-bohemian resorts, where you are seen by such gossip-mongers as William Farbish."

"So, that's the specific charge, is it?"

"Yes, that's the specific charge, Mr. South may be a man of unusual talent and strength. But—he has done what no other man has done—with you. He has caused club gossip, which may easily be twisted and misconstrued."

"Do you fancy that Samson Smith could have taken me to the Wigwam road-house if I had not cared to go with him?"

The man shook his head.

"Certainly not! But the fact that you did care to go with him indicates an influence over you which is new. You have not sought the bohemian and unconventional phases of life with your other friends. There is no price under heaven I would not pay for your regard. None the less, I repeat that, at the present moment, I can see only two definitions for this mountaineer. Either he is a boulder, or else he is so densely ignorant and churlish that he is unfit to associate with you."

"I make no apologies for Mr. South," she said, "because none are needed. He is a stranger in New York, who knows nothing, and cares nothing about the conventionalities. If I chose to waive them, I think it was my right and my responsibility."

Horton said nothing, and, in a moment Adrienne Lescott's manner changed. She spoke more gently:

"Wilfred, I'm sorry you choose to take this prejudice against the boy. You could have done a great deal to help him. I wanted you to be friends."

"Thank you!" His manner was stiff. "I hardly think we'd hit it off together."

"I believe you are jealous!" she announced.

"Of course, I'm jealous," he replied, without evasion. "Possibly, I might have saved time in the first place by avowing my jealousy. I hasten now to make amends. I'm green-eyed."

She laid her gloved fingers lightly on his bride hand.

"Don't be," she advised; "I'm not in love with him. If I were, it wouldn't matter. He has "A neater, sweeter maiden,

He's told me all about her."

Horton shook his head, dubiously.

"I wish to the good Lord, he'd go back to her," he said.

S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, is man's architect. It contemplates the damage done and repairs the damage. It also looks after the possible damage and corrects all tendency to blood eruptions, decay of bones, clogging of joints and any and all of those myriad of destructive effects such as rheumatism, catarrh, swollen glands, sore throat, bronchial affections and the host of infirmities so well known as being caused by impure blood. And now, why should S. S. S. do all this? Simply because it is Nature's antidote, a remedy of searching influence. It contains a powerful, natural ingredient, that sweeps its way to the skin. And in doing this it not only annihilates destructive germs but causes them to be so converted that they are easily and harmlessly voided, expelled or destroyed and then driven out through the natural outlets of the body. Thus let S. S. S. be your safeguard in all blood troubles no matter what they are. It won't fail you. Get a bottle today of any druggist but refuse any and all substitutes.

Get in communication with the medical department. Write The Swift Specific Co., 54 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. This special advisory work on blood troubles has been of incalculable benefit and has cured a host of sufferers.

FEICK INTRODUCES BILLS TO REDUCE COST OF LIVING

"Anti-Veal" and "Anti-Middleman" Measures Aimed at Solution of That Problem.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, January 13—The high cost of living was given two resounding whacks today in the house when Representative Fred L. Feick (democrat) of DeKalb county, introduced his "anti-veal" and "anti middleman" bill. He would prohibit the slaughter of calves for three years hoping thereby to increase the production of beef and would prevent cities charging fees against farmers who would peddle their products directly to the consumers.

DIXON DECLARES HE IS NOT OPPOSED TO EQUAL SUFFRAGE

Fourth District Representative Explains Vote Against Montell Resolution in House.

In explaining his vote against the passage of the Montell woman's suffrage resolution in the House of representatives Tuesday, Congressman Lincoln Dixon, of the Fourth Indiana congressional district, said that he was not opposed to equal suffrage but thought it was a question that should be decided by the state and not the federal government. The defeat of the resolution followed several hours of debate. The vote was 204 to 174 against the passage of the resolution.

Congressman Dixon said:

"I am not opposed to equal suffrage, but I will not vote for the pending resolution. The question before the house is whether equal suffrage should be incorporated in the federal Constitution. The merit of equal suffrage is not to be considered; that question can only be met when presented in the proper constitutional forum, and for me that is in Indiana.

"I believe in local self-government and the fundamental principles upon which this republic was established. The federal government for national affairs and the state government for local and state affairs. These have always been regarded as the foundation upon which our government rests.

"Indiana grants me the right of suffrage and is the proper power to grant equal suffrage. Some people look to the federal government as the panacea for all evils, while they refuse to assist in securing the desired result through their own local government. I am opposed to the centralization of power in the national government by taking from my state its constitutional powers. The question of suffrage is a state matter to be settled by each state. Indiana can determine this matter for her people and I reject the proposition of allowing the other states to determine it for us. They would force upon us property qualifications or other requirements antagonistic to our wishes. It is suggested that the popular vote is for the amendment. This may be true, but I refuse to surrender the rights of my state in order to be with the popular side and against my course of duty."

That might have happened to ME

WE never know when to look for it. Well and happy today—sick, disabled or dead tomorrow. Wonder if that poor chap left anything.

Well—if my time ever comes, I'll know that the wife and babies are provided for. At least $5,000 if I'm killed, and from $25 to $50 a week if I'm disabled. My AETNA ACCUMULATIVE ACCIDENT POLICY will take care of us all. Pays for a surgical operation or hospital expense, too.

Man on a salary certainly ought to couple up with this AETNA proposition. Those chaps who put it off-until-tomorrow don't realize what a pitiful fix a penniless, fatherless family is in. Be wise—
